

► What is LibKey Nomad

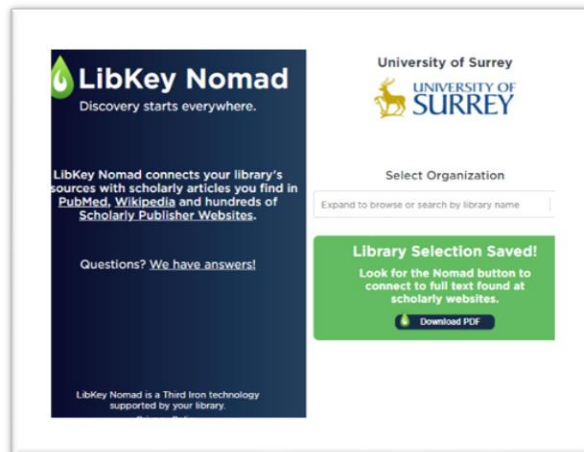

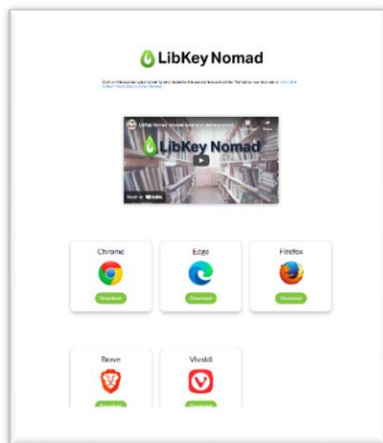

LibKey Nomad is a web browser extension that links you directly to articles subscribed to by the University of Surrey as you research on the internet.

LibKey Nomad checks the Library's holdings information - and open access alternatives - to determine the best place to source the article and will automatically take you to the full-text if available.

► How do I install LibKey Nomad?

Download LibKey Nomad via libkeynomad.com choosing your preferred browser and select the 'University of Surrey'.

You only have to do this once and the extension stays on your browser.

► Using LibKey Nomad

If you are browsing for an article online, LibKey Nomad will appear in the bottom left corner of compatible websites, if the Library has access to the article or if there is an open access copy available.

Clicking on 'Download PDF' or 'Article Link' will take you directly to the article. Accessing the article off campus may direct you to sign in with your University credentials.

You will see open access alternatives if the article isn't available via a University of Surrey subscription.

LibKey Nomad also brings increased and easier functionality to PubMed, Web of Science and Scopus.

With LibKey Nomad installed PubMed will display an in-line "Download PDF" link as well as a link to the issue's table of contents where the article appears.

▶ LibKey Nomad FAQs

What do the different Nomad buttons mean?

Different Nomad buttons appear depending on the availability of the article.

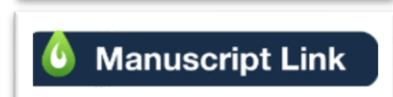

The Library has this item and you can instantly download the PDF Full Text in one click.

The Library has this item and we can link you directly to the article page, where you can access the full text.

There is an open access version of this article available for free online. Note this may not be the final, published version of the article.

Which publisher sites does LibKey Nomad work with?

For the full list of supported publishers see the following page: What publishers do you support?

For further support with LibKey Nomad please email library@surrey.ac.uk