

Spread awareness on healthy kitchen practices

Indoor air pollution and strategies for mitigation should be part of national awareness campaigns with a special focus on people more involved in household activities. For example, the fundamental scientific, behavioural and technical considerations are reinforced as part of practices recommended in this guide, to help protect the health of homeowners. The increasing availability of affordable indoor air quality monitoring devices could support relevant hands-on exercises and home occupant-led experiments.

GLOBAL CENTRE FOR CLEAN AIR RESEARCH

UNIVERSITY OF SURREY

Guildford
Living Lab