ECC Workshop for researchers: Identifying Career Options

Overview:
Identifying your career options post PhD / Post Doc can be daunting. To make sure your next step is the right one, it is important to take the time to understand your skills, abilities and drivers. Once you have done this, the next phase is identifying what options are available, best suited to you and where to find them. You can utilise these career management techniques as you progress through your career.

By the end of this workshop you will:
- Understand what you want from your career and/or next role and what you have to offer
- Develop strategies to research your options, uncover opportunities and build your network
- Be able to identify the next relevant step and make an informed decision.

Additional notes:
This workshop is interactive and will include exercises to enable you to consider your skills, qualities and values. These exercises will help you to identify what you need to focus on next, and give you the tools to continue to develop strategies and put them into action after the session.

Booking:
- If you are a PhD student, you can book directly using SITS.
- If you are an Early Career Researcher or Early Career Academic – please e-mail RDP@surrey.ac.uk to register.

_Employability and Careers Centre - Researchers_